With the help of writer Rothstein, urology professor Goldstein has produced this work focusing on male impotence (the title may mislead) with an emphasis on the interacting effects of psychological and physiological problems. The work is told from the physician's perspective, with illustrative anecdotes and examples drawn from cases. While certainly not as accessible as Eileen and Bruce MacKenzie's It's Not All in Your Head (LJ 4/15/88), this nonetheless has the same self-help approach as Steven Morganstern's Love Again, Live Again (Prentice Hall, 1988). Except for the brief section on the future, this work has nothing new to add to the many current works on the topic. If, however, your collection lacks a current work on impotence, this title would be a good addition.—Robert Aken, Univ. of Kentucky Libs., Lexington
